OCTOBERFEST EXTENDED THROUGH WINTER

The Kaiser announced today that the annual "March of the Rhine" has been canceled, and instead Oktoberfest will be extended through January or February. The Reichswehr auf Munich, an astounding army of lederhosen wearing bavarians, have elected to remain in Munich and continue drinking. Said one soldier "Hey, the beer is better here anyway. And all those Italians and Bohemians camping in the hills nearby; they know how to party. It's quite fun. I just hope they don't think they can stay."

In order to support the few Bavarian guests who prefer wine, the Kaiser has requested that the Republic of France send a few barrels of wine into Munich. Said Wilhelm Gotstuch, general plenipotentiary of the Bavarian army, "With all these Italians, Hungarians and French men involved, I'm a bit concerned things will get out of hand. I mean, what if the wine never arrives? How will we keep the Italians happy then, hm?" Of the Bohemians rumored to be camping in the hills nearby, he had no comment.
